

AN EXPLOSION.

Boilers in the Newport Iron Works Let Go.

Two Men Fatally Injured and the Works Partially Wrecked.

It Is Believed That Some Tramps, Who Nightly Congregate There, Were Buried in the Debris—Great Pieces of Iron Hurtled Hundreds of Feet.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 14.—At 11 o'clock Tuesday night four boilers of the Newport Iron and Steel works let go and made a wreck of the lower half of the establishment. Two men are injured, probably fatally, as one was reported dying when received at the hospital. The other man is said to have a broken back, while a third was but slightly injured.

Like all structures of that nature, the building was made of corrugated iron, and was supposed to be fire-proof, but almost instantly after the explosion a fire broke out, and had to be extinguished by the Newport fire department before they could do anything to ascertain who was in the wreck. As soon as the flames had been put out, Officers Thos. Taylor, John Oldham and McNamara made their way into the ruins, and found Herman Wessling, one of the three night firemen, almost covered by the debris. He was gotten out and conveyed to his home, where it was found that his back was broken and both legs crushed, while the flesh was scalded all over the body.

Another searching party found George Reed, a fireman, and he was taken by the patrol to St. Elizabeth's hospital, Covington, where it was stated that he could not live till morning. Both his legs and arms are broken, and his flesh was so horribly burned that two fingers dropped off as the police were carrying him up the steps of the institution. The third man was Henry Macke, who is but slightly burned by water, and who is more frightened than hurt. Macke explained that he was sitting between boilers two and five when the explosion occurred. He was knocked over, and came near getting into the fire during the excitement. It is not known where Wessling and Reed were at the time, as they are too severely injured to tell anything.

According to the mill hands, the boilers in the establishment, and there are ten, were tested by a man named Joseph Kuebler one week ago. It is not known what his report was, but it is presumed that he thought the plant safe.

It is estimated that the loss will be from $12,000 to $15,000, and that it is fully covered by insurance. The mill employs forty men in the day. These work from 4 in the morning till about 11, and at noon a force of twenty-one goes on. These quit last night two hours before the accident occurred.

Frank Rust, the night boss, was on his round to see that all had left the building, when the explosion occurred. He thinks that all had gone, but says it is probable that some tramps may have been killed, as the mill was a favorite sleeping place for that class.

A piece or section of the boiler, weighing several hundred pounds, was found over five hundred feet from the scene of the accident. Pieces weighing one hundred and fifty pounds were found near the new Licking bridge, fully three squares from the sheds. One large section, weighing about two hundred pounds, was found a square off on Lowell street. People living in lower Covington distinctly felt the shock, and windows were broken in the surrounding houses for several squares in the neighborhood of the accident.

Plumber Charged With Incendiarism. INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 14.—William M. Powers, a plumber, was arrested at 2:15 Tuesday morning as the incendiary who burned the Capital City planing-mill plant Monday night, and who attempted to burn another planing-mill and a kiln at the same time. The authorities believe he has caused the destruction of planing-mill and factory property valued at $500,000 in this city within the past seven months, and that he is the party for whose conviction the insurance companies offer $1,000 reward. He denied his guilt Tuesday and waived preliminary examination. The evidence is circumstantial.

Noted Slave Man Dead. VICKSBURG, Miss., Dec. 14.—Capt. Abraham Auter, for seventy-one years a resident of this place, and honored and esteemed by all who knew him, died Tuesday morning. He came here in 1821, from Hamilton county, Ohio, and, entering the steamboat business, became noted as a builder, owner and commander of steamers. He was the pioneer in steam navigation in Yazoo river, and built and commanded several fine vessels in the New Orleans and Vicksburg trade. Among others the Mameppa, Emperor and Vicksburg. He was in his 89th year.

A Noted Veteran Dying. NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Peter Hart, sixty-nine years old, a veteran of the civil war, who distinguished himself by mailing the flag to the staff at Fort Sumter, is dying at his home, No. 335 Bedford avenue, Williamsburg. When the American flag was shot down at Sumter, Hart seized the torn and ridged emblem and nailed it to the staff again. He was warmly congratulated by Maj. Anderson, the commander of the fort, and later the flag was used as a winding sheet for Maj. Anderson, and buried with him.

The Bridegroom Missing. GOSHEN, Ind., Dec. 14.—Rollin Chaten, of Laporte, who was engaged to be married Tuesday to Miss Adeline Hare, of Napanee, suddenly left his fiancée for Chicago, shortly before the ceremony, telling no one of his plans. Miss Hare, in all her wedding finery, awaited him and the minister's coming anxiously but vainly, when the truth was learned. No reason for Chaten's queer actions is known.

DOUBLE MURDER.

The Heads of a White Man and a Colored Woman Mashed With a Hammer.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Dec. 14.—A double murder was committed Monday night at Yellow Springs, nine miles south of here, the victims being George Koogler, a farmer, and a woman named Lou Roberts, colored, better known as Lou Keys. The bodies were found Tuesday morning at the woman's home, a frame shanty on the outskirts of the village known as "Frogtown." Koogler was lying in front of the house with his head upon the doorstep, and the woman in the front room with her head toward the door. Both their heads were mashed in, and so badly were their skulls fractured that death must have been instantaneous.

The horrible deed was committed with a hammer the woman used to break coal with. It was found in the coal shed covered with blood. The entire affair is shrouded in mystery. The two were last seen alive together at Hunter's restaurant eating oysters. This was at 11 o'clock, and they were intoxicated. They left together and started for the woman's home. From the condition of the bodies the crime must have been committed shortly after their arrival. Koogler had removed his overcoat and hat and the woman her cloak and bonnet. There were no signs of a struggle. Koogler's pockets were rifled and a trunk in the house ransacked. Andrew Quinn, colored, who lives about 100 yards from the house, testified before the coroner that he heard them going to the house and that there were three in the party; that he recognized their voices, and also the voice of a colored fellow named Hunter, who hung about the house considerably, but the citizens are inclined to discredit his story.

The murderer is not known, and speculation is rife as to who did it. The theory advanced by the authorities is that the motive for the murder was robbery, which is shown by the man's pockets being rifled and the trunk ransacked, and that he followed them to the house. Koogler was an ex-soldier and drew a large pension. He went to the Springs to draw his pension Monday, but it had not arrived. He was a widower, 45 years old, with three children, and resided three miles north-west of the village. The woman was 35 years old, unmarried, and bore an unsavory reputation. The coroner is investigating the case, but has made no arrests.

MONEY CONFERENCE.

A Delegate from India Takes Great Pleasure in Task.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 14.—At the sitting Tuesday of the International Monetary conference, Sir Guilford Houldsworth, one of two delegates representing the Indian government, protested against the obstructions offered by British delegates at this and previous conferences. But for the tactics employed by the representatives of Great Britain the currency question would have been settled long ago. Sir Guilford declared that the situation in Great Britain had greatly changed since November 22, the date of the first meeting of the conference, and he suggested that the conference adjourn for a few weeks, to enable the British government to reconsider the whole question. He gave as the reasons for the change in the situation in Great Britain the statement in favor of bi-metalism made by Archbishop Walsh, of Dublin, the resolutions adopted by the agricultural conference held a few days ago in London, and the petitions forwarded to the government by the various chambers of commerce.

Of the others, the father, mother and a girl aged twenty are in a very precarious condition.

TRAIN HELD UP.

The Fast Flying Virginian Boarded by Bandits.

The Passengers Resist Them and Many Shots Are Exchanged.

A Chicago Man Named Teck Led the Band Against the Highwayman and Leased His Life—Peter Drake, a Passenger, Wounded—They Escape.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 14.—An attack of unparalleled severity and followed by a resistance as fierce as it was unexpected occurred in rear of Guyandotte, W. Va. The first authentic report of the robbery was received here about noon Tuesday, and was from Superintendent Gill of the C. & O. at Hinton, W. Va. The C. &. O. train, known as the Fast Flying Virginian, left Cincinnati for the East at 8:15 p. m. Monday. No incident of any note happened till the cars stopped at Huntington, when two strange looking men boarded the train. They went directly to the smoking car. Hardly had the train got well into the country district, than they pulled masks over their faces and marched from the smoking car into the passenger coach. With an oath one of them ordered the occupants of the car which they left not to move on the peril of their lives.

One of the strangers stationed himself at one end and the other at the other end of the car and ordered everyone to hold up his hands. They followed this fierce order with a number of shots, fired promiscuously and near the heads of several passengers.

But they had reckoned without their host and found a surprise in a man whose act was one of a thousand. Near one of the highwaymen sat a passenger named Teck, who was on his way from Chicago to Germany. Before the robber realized what was up Teck had sprung upon him and knocked him down. The deed cost him his life, for the next minute the other marauder had sent a bullet into his brain. He died instantly. But his example was lost on the passengers, whom the sight of the murder infuriated. They rose as a man and rushed on the villains, hungering to tear them to pieces. The leader among them was the train collector. Shots were exchanged, and another passenger, Peter Drake, was wounded in the foot and the leg.

The occupants of the smoking car now began pouring in, and the robbers saw that their only chance for life was to jump from the fast flying train. Backing toward the door, they suddenly threw it ajar, and in an instant had dropped from the platform and disappeared in the woods.

In their hurry they had left behind them a brace of empty revolvers. The sheriff of the county was notified, and he, with a posse and a railroad officer, instantly began pursuit.

The murderers were evidently bent on robbery and their cool desperation leads to the belief that they are two of the most daring criminals in the country. Teck's brave resistance, which cost him his life, foiled them. They did not secure a dollar. Drake's wounds are reported as not serious.

Oscar Teck, who was killed by the robbers, was with his intended bride. Her name is Anna Eichler, and she is niece of Henry Eichler, of 340 McKean avenue. She and Teck had come to this country from Germany with the intention of marrying.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

A Discarded Lover Shoots the Girl and Kills Himself.

STROUBSBURG, Pa., Dec. 14.—Peter Bender and Anna Boyer, of Canandensis, were engaged to be married. Bender's conduct led Miss Boyer to break the engagement, and despite Bender's appeals she adhered to her resolution not to marry him. Becoming desperate at the girl's repeated refusal to re-engage herself to him Bender threatened to kill her. Miss Boyer smiled and left him. She met Bender Monday, and when she still persisted in declining to marry him he drew a revolver and, crying out that if she would not marry him she would marry no one else, he shot her in the neck. Thinking the girl dead Bender placed the pistol to his head and blew out his brains. When picked up she was alive but will probably die.

Want to Extend the Fair.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—There is a good deal of talk among the World's fair directors and others immediately connected with the management of the "White City" of continuing the fair for another year after November next. The leaders believe that six months is rather a short time for the life of the splendid palaces which have been erected at Jackson park. Of course it all depends on the success of the fair, next upon the willingness of exhibitors to maintain their displays a second season and the consent of the south side park commissioners.
